Providing a Better Understanding of Your Tax Deferred Retirement Benefit

2nd Quarter 2016

In this edition...

We will continue our discussion of factors identified in our 2014 survey as preventing eligible employees from utilizing a voluntary retirement plan such as a 403(b) or 457(b). OMNI Updates has attempted to address each concern pinpointed by the survey, and provide useful information and clarity on the subject matter. It is our hope that you can use this information to help achieve your retirement goals. If you have missed any OMNI Updates, newsletters from the past two years are archived on our website at: <https://omni403b.com/Participants.aspx>.

Thanks to all who participated in our #Savein16 contest! Please continue to frequent our website and social media platforms. We hope that our online resources can provide up to date information on OMNI and the retirement planning environment.

Stock Market VOLATILITY

Should you be concerned?

Concerns about losing one's nest egg came to the forefront with the 2008 financial crisis when many people saw their balances dwindle. Recent uncertainty in the stock market has once again made headlines in the early months of 2016. Whether these market fluctuations affected you personally or your friends, family or colleagues, the issue of stock market volatility for retirement investors became more important than ever. These concerns were reflected in OMNI's 2014 survey, with 12% of respondents citing "fear of stock market volatility" as a factor which made them reluctant to utilize their 403(b)/457(b) plans.

All investments entail a degree of risk, and in light of this fact it is understandable that some are reluctant to utilize voluntary plans. If stock market volatility remains a concern for you as you plan for your retirement, here are a few points to consider:

- Service providers may offer interest bearing and/or stable value funds that are not directly tied to market performance.
- Many service providers offer an array of investment vehicles that allow you to select investment products which align with your level of risk tolerance.
- Target date funds can be yet another option to assist in the management of risk. These investment vehicles are typically designed to decrease your exposure to risk as you get closer to your anticipated retirement date. For example, if you are planning to retire 30 years from now, i.e., in 2045, a Target Date 2045 fund will become progressively more conservative as you approach that date.

Many service providers provide managed accounts, risk management tools and other avenues to assist you in the retirement planning process. Contact your provider to see what may be available.
